The Center for
MINDFUL EATING

What is The Center for Mindful Eating?

The Center for Mindful Eating (TCME) is a member supported, nonprofit, nonreligious organization whose goals are to disseminate information related to the principles of Mindful Eating and provide assistance to professionals and organizations to implement applications of Mindful Eating into new and existing programs.

How does TCME help?

The Center provides information and resources to professionals interested in helping patients and clients develop a healthier approach to eating, bringing it into balance with other important aspects of life.

Who is part of TCME?

TCME is a multi-disciplinary organization made up of professionals including: psychologists, psychotherapists, social workers, dietitians, educators, teachers, physicians, nurses, environmentalists, public health organizations and more.

“After I washed the strawberry, I noticed how the water clung to the tiny hairs on the fruit. It seemed so incredible to me that I had never seen that before.”

What is Mindful Eating?

Mindful Eating brings mindfulness to food choice and to the experience of eating. Mindfulness is the capacity to bring full attention and awareness to one's experience, in the moment, without judgment. Mindfulness thereby releases us from our automatic reactions, fears and attachments, allowing engagement of inner wisdom. Mindful eating can include:

1. Allowing yourself to become aware of the positive and nurturing opportunities that are available through food selection and preparation by respecting your own inner wisdom.
2. Choosing to eat food that is both satisfying to you and nourishing to your body by using all your senses to explore and savor.
3. Acknowledging responses to food (likes, dislikes or neutral reactions without judgment.
4. Learning to be aware of physical hunger and satiety cues to guide your decisions to begin and end eating.
